Flying machines on show

WARPLANES, business jets, helicopters - 42 flying machines in all - will greet visitors to the first Singapore Airshow's static display area.

The twin-deck Airbus A380, the world's largest airliner by size and capacity, will also be on show there and in the air.

The 90-minute aerial display will see six planes and helicopters in action from 12.30pm between Feb 19 and 24.

Aerial aerobatics will be performed by the six-aircraft teams from the Royal Australian Air Force's Roulettes and the Republic of Singapore Air Force's Black Knights.

When it comes to the A380's turn to perform, visitors will see it being towed on a taxiway as wide as a six-lane road to the Changi Air Base runway, which is just outside the airshow site.

After take-off, it will perform low-level manoeuvres. On landing, it will again be seen being towed back to its berthing area.

Among the planes that will perform are jet trainers designed for air forces to train new pilots, such as the Aermacchi M-346 from Italy and the T-50 Golden Eagle from South Korea.
